The stakes are high for public accounting and consulting firms. As the world of business becomes increasingly sophisticated, clients are demanding more advanced, high-value and cost-effective business solutions. To meet this demand, accounting and consulting firms must continually recruit top talent to enhance their competitive advantage with new services, drive revenue growth, and increase profit margins.

Just a decade ago, the term "lateral hire" had little meaning to most public accounting and consulting firm leaders. In today’s aggressive business climate, attracting lateral partners and emerging leaders from the outside is an appealing strategy for propelling organizations forward.

Koltin Consulting Group’s Executive Search practice conducted a study of 150 lateral hires made by non-Big 4 public accounting and financial consulting firms between January 1st and October 31st, 2013. The results of the study are broken down into hires by region, service line, level of hire, gender, industry expertise, technical expertise, and firm revenue size.

Some quick findings:

- Increasingly, firms are spending money at the heavyweight level, with the majority of firms seeking to attract lateral partners in order to accelerate growth.
- The most lateral hires were made in the regions that are home to the largest population of Top-100 firms.
- Lateral hires made in seven states represent 60% of the total lateral hires.
- Firms can’t get enough highly qualified tax talent, a complete role reversal from five years ago when the hiring surge of experienced auditors ignited by Sarbanes-Oxley was still in full effect.
- Gone are the days of the generalist, with the majority of laterals being sought out for their industry and/or subject matter expertise.

Please see the infographics below for more information on the findings.
LATERAL HIRES BY REGION

∗ States in which the highest percentage of lateral hires were made:

NY = 19%  CA = 10%  PA = 9%  GA = 8%  VA = 5%  TX = 5%  IL = 4%
The Big 4 and national firms have been investing heavily in advisory/consulting services and the trend has spread across the industry.
While rising stars may exist in-house, for most firms the waiting period between grooming potential talent and that talent developing into high-performers simply takes too long.
The percentage of lateral hires by gender is almost exactly equal to national statistics on female to male partners.
Other highly sought after industry expertise: Construction, Manufacturing, Hospitality and Insurance.
LATERAL HIRES BY TECHNICAL EXPERTISE

- International Tax
- Partnerships
- Transactions
- Trusts & Estates
- Yellow Book/Circular A-133 Audits
- State & Local Tax

Other highly sought after technical expertise: Quality Assurance, Forensic Accounting & Litigation Support.
